Annual review of child maintenance

We've worked out your payments for the next 12 months

Dear Mr Hopkinson

We've now completed the annual review of your child maintenance.

We've worked out the amount you must pay each week for the next 12 months from 28 June 2023 until your next annual review.

What this means for you

We've been given information that your gross weekly income is £805.88. This information was given to HM Revenue & Customs (HMRC) by you, your employer or a third party such as your accountant. This figure is from the tax year ending 2023, your latest available full tax year.

We've used this amount of gross weekly income to work out your child maintenance payments for the next 12 months from 28 June 2023.

We work out child maintenance as a weekly amount and we call this your weekly liability. From 28 June 2023 your weekly liability is £96.53 per week to support the following child:

Cain, born on 30 January 2013

We use your weekly liability to work out your payment plan. Payments could be weekly or monthly depending on your method of payment.

You make child maintenance payments using our Direct Pay service. This means although we've worked out a legally binding weekly payment, you have agreed how and when payments should be made. Where possible you and the receiving parent should work together to make sure the payment plan is met.

The Child Maintenance Service is part of the Department for Work & Pensions. The service administers the statutory Child Maintenance 2012 scheme.
